prayer requests

- PRAISE that God brought in the financial support that I needed in order to start ministry!
- For the heart and mindset of prayer to continue at Cal Poly through this year.
- For the students who will be attending a conference this weekend about life after college.
- For me as I am learning about God's love and want to be able to display that to others even more.

health update

It looks like my doctors have found the right combination of medicines to work against my migraines! I am having no side effects to the medications I am on and my migraines have decreased from 4 a week to 1 every 2 weeks. This is definitely a huge praise, especially as I head into ministry again. Thank you so much for your prayers through all of this. God has shown Himself to be faithful!

THE POWER OF PRAYER

In my last prayer letter, I talked about the amazing growth that God brought in Campus Crusade at Cal Poly over the last fifteen years. I've realized though, that I never explained how it happened. So I figured that in a two part prayer letter series, I would tell you. If I could sum up what caused the growth in our ministry in one word, it would be PRAYER. I remember coming into college as a Freshman and just being blown away by the passion and amount of prayer that was happening on a regular basis. From worship/prayer nights to 24/7 prayer (24 hours a day, 7 days a week) to random prayer nights started on a whim, the students at Cal Poly will not stop praying!

Let's pause for a second. What would happen to your family if you prayed like this? To your neighbors? Coworkers? Friends? I can say without a doubt, that God would listen to your prayers and answer them according to His will! And the more we pray, the more our hearts begin to align with the passions of God. Pretty sweet!

Back to Cal Poly. As a result of all this prayer, God has not only ignited our students' hearts for what He is doing, but He is giving each of them amazing opportunities to share their faith with friends and neighbors, the likes of which I have never seen! So yes, you can say that evangelism plays a part and you can certainly say that our Bible studies and weekly meeting play a part, but truthfully, without the constant prayer going on, I really do believe that both the evangelism and the Bible studies would be much less effective. Prayer has been the igniting force behind all of the growth at Cal Poly. We serve a great God, let's continually approach Him in prayer.
