summer update

Since I have been accepted to join staff with Campus Crusade, I will be spending the summer in Ft. Collins, Colorado! It is there that I will be taking seminary classes including Bible Study Methods, Christian Theology, and New Testament Survey. I am so excited for what this summer will look like and for what God will do next year as I may move to another campus.

EL SALVADOR SPRING BREAK

[1] THE CAL POLY GUYS

[2] PAINTING A SCHOOL

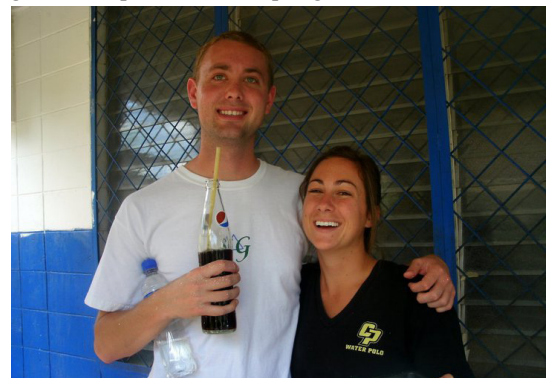

A few weeks ago, I had the amazing privilege of taking 42 people to El Salvador, including two Cal Poly professors! Since my cousin Natalie, has been there this entire year, I knew what she had told me about El Salvador. Even still, because the country had been through civil war only 20 years ago, I still wasn't sure what to expect. And sure enough, I was surprised. At pretty much every corner, in front of every store, and even on the college campuses, guards with large guns were constantly watching everything that happened. It was only a little bit intimidating. Even when I walked out of the hospital (I had to have stitches removed), I found myself standing in the midst of several thousand people that were a part of a Communist rally. Needless to say, it was an interesting trip.

It's funny though, in the hardest of circumstances, God always seems to do the most amazing work! While we were there, one of the Cal Poly professors spoke to a group of Salvadorian professors about her definition of success. Over the course of that talk, it was interesting to see the professors' responses. At the end, one of the professors started rattling on in Spanish for like 10 minutes and I had absolutely no idea what was going on. It turned out that this professor was saying that Campus Crusade was turning the students on this campus around and not only getting them to care about their beliefs, but also their country. This professor was entirely making a case for Campus Crusade being on campus and I had never even seen her before!

While we were there, we also got to do campus evangelism and service projects. For one of the service projects, we were able to go to a government-run orphanage. It was unlike anything I had ever seen because most of the kids that were at this orphanage were not actually orphans. These kids had been abandoned by their parents or had been taken from their parents because of abuse. One little girl that was only 3 weeks old had been beaten by her mother before even being born. The mother didn't want her and so after taking massive amounts of drugs trying to kill the little girl inside of her, the mother beat herself with a metal rod trying to kill the girl once again. Miraculously, this little girl survived and is now being taken care of at this orphanage. It is amazing to see God save lives.

One of the most exciting things that happened over spring break was that a team was raised up to go to El Salvador for all of next year. Several students on our trip were called to a year-long mission to El Salvador and they will be there starting in August! God is faithful to see His work continue. I'm just glad that I got to be a part of it over spring break.

Seeing my cousin Natalie for the first time in 9 months!
